Its concept was founded in a distillation of a family of platonic forms evidencing fundamental volumetric relationships. Qualities of the original home were studied and reinterpreted; maintaining a respect for its most endearing features while allowing the new design to explore other site aspects as well as a finer scaled detail throughout. The building's 2,500 square feet makes efficient and succinct use of all aspects of the property, smartly reclaiming an expansion of usable space for overlook, appropriating privatized yard spaces, and above all capturing a deep expression of tactile warmth rooted in tranquil livability.
